

It hurts

Saturday, 30 January 2010 19:00

The family is buckled up in the car and we're ready to do a little grocery shopping. Typically I lean over and give Aline a little peck before we head out.

She leans in, turns her head and says: It hurts to look at you.

Good thing I don't take it personally as her neck has been giving her pains recently. We've been joking about how we're like a couple of seniors lately.